

December 8, 2022

Good morning! It's Irene Qiu from 731 and I'm here this Thoughtful Thursday on behalf of the S.E.A.L Team.

December 8 is recognized as National Blue-Collar Day. It is a time to honor the contributions of law enforcement personnel, firefighters, and blue-collar employees. These undervalued employees make our community function. We should all have appreciation, respect, and gratitude for blue-collar employees. You might now be wondering, "Who are these blue-collar workers?"

The blue-collar worker is frequently used as a metaphor for America's working class. Manual laborers are considered blue-collar workers. Auto mechanic, bricklayer, construction workers, bus drivers, electricians, plumbers, firefighter, police officers, janitors and cooks are a few examples of this type of work.

Make sure to thank any blue-collar workers you know for their efforts today.

Thanks for listening have a True-Blue Thursday 😊
