Good morning IS 201, my name is Amelia from class 731 and I'm here with you this Thoughtful Thursday on behalf of the Seal Team.

Today is World Book Day, a day to celebrate the joy of reading and the power of books in our lives. Reading is one of the most important skills we learn in school because it helps us understand information, build vocabulary, and become stronger thinkers. When we read, we can travel to different places, learn about history, and explore new ideas without ever leaving our seats. Books also help us develop empathy by allowing us to see the world through other people's experiences. This connects to what we do in class every day, whether it's reading a story, solving a problem, or learning something new, strong reading skills help us succeed.

So today, take a few extra minutes to read something you enjoy, and remember that every page you turn helps you grow as a student and as a person!

Like Leonardo Da Vinci, the affirmation of the day is, "I take pride in being a thinker and a dreamer."

Thanks for listening and have a Turning Pages Thursday 😊
